FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 31, 1856.

THE FASHIONS.—We publish to-day a report of the New York, Paris, and London fashions for November from our regular New York correspondent, who is on fair on this subject. The letter will claim the attention of our lady readers.

Among the passengers on the steamship Athenic, which arrived at New York on Tuesday night, from Liverpool, were Mr. T. C. Cleman and family of this city.

Among the births announced in late California papers is the following: "At San Francisco, Sept. 19, Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne, of a son."

[From our own Correspondent]

FASHIONABLE INTELLIGENCE.

NEW YORK FASHIONS FOR NOVEMBER.—The weather has been quite changeable and unusually cool for the past month, so that some furs have been in great demand, and have already appeared in the streets. Indeed furs are the rage this season, and therefore the state of the atmosphere is of little consequence. Mr. Godfrey Gunter, of Maiden Lane, the head of the oldest firm in the United States, informed me the other day that his business was double this year that of any preceding year since his house was established, which was in 1820. A great deal of extravagance is shown in the selection of the rarest and most costly furs. "Russian Crown Sable" is the ambition of all our fashionable ladies, a set of which is worth $2,000. A great many orders have been received for a Fichouette, or Russian Sable cape, at $1,200 dollars each. A small tippet was exhibited, a little larger than a victorine, worth $500. These furs are only obtained with great difficulty and expense, and in this manner: The intelligent reader knows that all Russian cities are surrounded by walls, and entered by gates, which are constantly guarded by sentinels, who examine the passports of those desiring to enter. In the city they have no prisons, or jails, for persons who have committed offenses, but, instead of this, they are carried over the frontier into the mountains of Siberia, and told that, when they have obtained so many sable skins, a pardon will be granted them. Thus they spend their time in hunting sables, and, when they have procured so many, they present themselves at the gate of the city, and the number is credited to their account, until they have obtained sufficient to procure their discharge. This is done by the Emperor for the purpose of securing to the royal family the exclusive use of this particular kind of fur. But there are other persons who are harassed for political offenses, and, never expecting to return to their homes, are not at all scrupulous in exchanging their skins to the Jew traders for whatever articles of comfort or convenience they may be able to obtain. These Jew peddlars visit them as they do our North American Indians, and exchange articles of clothing or tobacco for the skins of the Siberian squirrel or other furs, and smug off as many sables as they can get, they carry them to the Leipzig fair, where a great trade of furs, which correspond to our great book sales in New York, takes place. There they are eagerly bought up for the English and French markets at extravagant prices, a few finding their way here, though the most that are sold under that name are Hudson Bay sables, which rank next to Russian sable. A number of consignments were made to the United States last year because of the unsettled state of affairs in Europe, this having the reputation of a very safe market.

FURS IN GENERAL—THEIR QUALITY AND PRICE.—Hudson Bay Sable ranks next to Russian Sable in quality and price, a very fine set of these being worth $700 to $1000. The most popular of all furs are the Minks, of which five times as many as any other are sold. A good set of these are very handsome, and worth $150. Canadian Sable is also very highly valued, but not so much worn as Stone Martin, which is in some respects superior to mink. That is, the finest mink is superior to the newest stone martin, but the latter is less variable in its quality. Ermine is a very elegant looking fur, but has lost rank in the world of fashion. It is still worn for opera and concert cloaks, but is rarely seen on the promenade. A very fine set at Mr. Balpin's, on Broadway, can be obtained for $180. The white of these furs is exclusively pure and silvery, while the black tufts are shaded off into the most delicate straw colors. The Siberian Squirrel is something like Ermine, but not so fine or delicate. It is shaded with drab, but has the black spots which distinguish the ermine. It has greatly increased in value since September, and the probability is that it will be worth double, next year, the price of any former years. This is also true in a much greater degree of American mink. A few years ago a fashionable lady would not wear an American fur, and skins could be bought for fifty cents that are now worth $5. Thus the increase in the sale of fancy furs has doubled the value ten times. German Fitch are considered the best of the common furs, and a good set will bring $100. After these come Musk Squash, or Musk Rat, Opposum, and Mountain Martin, and the common Rabbit. A set of these can be obtained for any price from $20 to $50. A set comprises a large cape, rather larger and more graceful shape than last year, being pointed at the back, with long deep tabs in front which fall gracefully over the arm and form a half sleeve, a victorine, cuffs, and muff. The cuffs are long and pointed at the top, and the muffs still retain the petite and delicate proportions of last season. There is a "tipped" which is not included in the set unless it takes the place of the cape, it being larger than a victorine, and smaller than the cardinals, and worn with a shawl at a ball or party.

OPENING OF WINTER BONNETS.

An opening of winter bonnets took place a few days ago, at which were exhibited some very recherche styles, both of home and foreign manufacture. At the salon of Madame Harris & Son, who have just returned from Paris, were some elegant chapeaus from the well-known establishment of Madame Alexandre, Paris. They are slightly larger, with much less floridness of decoration than has been observable for the past year. The materials are various kinds of velvet—Moss velvet, a charming variety that looks like white velvet delicately crystallized; "imperial" velvet, which is a sort of "rep" style; and the fine dotted velvet. These are in chaste and exquisite shades of drab, green, brown, and mallow, which last is an exceedingly fashionable and stylish color this season. White are also much worn, but more for brides and opera hats than any other purpose. A feature in the Parisian hats is that the rucks are no longer worn full all round the fall, but only at the sides; round the front is simply a fall of lace, which touches the forehead, and shades a plain band of velvet of the color of the inside trimming. Feathers and rich velvet leaves are the most fashionable trimmings, as they were earlier in the season; but the varieties in feathers are much greater, and some of them very pretty and fanciful. A new style of chapeau has been introduced into Paris by a few daring ladies; it is of black or brown leather, and resembles a riding hat, but has a fall of black lace all round the brim, which is deep enough to entirely shade the face. A single ostrich plume is placed across the front, and the tout ensemble is very dashing and piquant.

PANIC IN THE SILK TRADE—NEW CLOAKS.

There has been a good deal of excitement in the silk trade lately, in consequence of a rumor that great numbers of the silk worms in the silk department of France had been attacked by a disease which was proving very fatal. A great rise in silk goods has indeed taken place, and it is true that agents have been sent to China and the West Indies to get a new supply of worms. Ladies are beginning to tremble for their flocks, but it must be confessed that the constant arrivals of rich and elegant dress goods give little reason to fear the supply is exhausted. Ubsel, Pierson, and Lake are constantly receiving new varieties in rich flounced robes, one of which was so exquisite that I cannot forbear describing it. It is a very fine shade of corn-colored taftas with flounces of white velvet, upon which is an embroidery of corn colored satin in flowers. The effect is perfectly charming, so soft and yet so bright. A novelty at this establishment is also found in the "Circassian robe," for morning dresses. They are of dark French calico, and obviate a difficulty with all French goods of this description, which is, that the pattern is too large for the waist. The skirts are composed of large stripes alternating with stripes composed of palm leaves, or some small design upon a dark ground. The part intended for the basque and sleeves is flounced only of these small designs, and distinct from this again there is a third intended for trimming. Five dollars each is the retail price for these "robes." There are some very handsome gowns in moire antique, plaided with the most strikingly contrasting colors and studded with brilliant flowers; but in plain colors, white drab, or the "Maria Louisa" blue, is the most in vogue. In Paris, black morie antique has been worn for dinner toilette, with plaid flounces of the gayest colors, but this style is hardly refined enough to become popular with our sensitive helles.

For evening dresses light materials will be worn, especially by young ladies. A new and very light Organdie muslin, flounced, and intended to be worn with a blonde cagoule in black and white, is extremely pretty and delicate, and will divide the suffragettes with a "zephyr" tissue, entirely new, and so airy and graceful that Titania herself might wear it with pleasure. Lace is also a great favorite, as over over graduated skirts of tissue; light blonde flounces are worn looped up at intervals with heath or the blue acacia; the hoddice is worn very low and curving in front so as to insert a lace chimelette, which is ornamented with a bouquet of the same flowers that trim the skirt. Black lace flounces are worn on white muslin dresses with distinguished effect, and a black lace head-dress accompanies it, fastened by a diamond star in such a manner as to give a Spanish effect to the figure.

The "Coronation" Cloak is a new and very elegant style, got up in honor of the Empress of Russia. The material is black velvet, hair cloth, and it is trimmed with a deep and costly imitation of Russian sable; it is in the Spanish circular form, and very large, flowing, and graceful. The same style is in black velvet trimmed with deep guipure lace, moire antique, and fine bugle trimming.

CRINOLINES, HOOPS, AND THE "UNION" SKIRT.

The extent of the manufacture of hooped skirts in this city can hardly be conceived by those who have not watched the progress of this branch of business. One firm alone, Douglass & Sherwood, turn out 3,000 skirts a day, beside the common cactus and quilted skirts woven by loom. They employ 300 young ladies, who earn from $6 to $9 a week, and occupy a three-story building, 200 feet deep by 30 wide. Specimens of the richest hair cloth or crinoline, fluted and flounced in every variety of style, are to be seen there, down to the common corded cactus at $7 a dozen. Hoops are as extensive as ever, and great pains are taken to obviate the difficulties complained of by ladies. The last novelty is called the "Union" skirt. It is made of dark cotton, with the lower part quilted in large diamonds, and finished round the bottom with jute cord. Above the quilting is a whalebone hoop, and, about a quarter of a yard above that, another. The back part is then finished by three small hoops, which form shirrs, and extend over the hips, where they are joined by tapes a quarter of a yard in length, which are suspended from the binding and attached to the hoop in front of the skirt. It is very artistically made, and exactly adapted to the season.

THE VAGABOND.—A Story of a Life.—For the past two years a very tall and singular looking woman, fantastically clad, has alternated her existence between the streets of the city and the vagrant quarters. She is deaf and dumb, and, though otherwise free from crime, she has nevertheless imbibed so strong a passion for drink that she is frequently found by the watchmen a companion of hogs in the kennel. The name of this wretched outcast is Mary Belknap, although she is more generally known by the sobriquet of the "Lady of Lyons." There is much in this poor creature's history to realize the old adage of "Truth is stranger than fiction," as will be seen by the following brief outline:

Five years ago she was an accomplished

danscuse, and as such was engaged by the Ravel troupe, with whom she continued for several years. At that time her graceful figure and queenlike appearance attracted the admiration of many of the opposite sex, one of whom, an accomplished libertine, succeeded in inveigling her from the path of virtue, when, leaving the troupe with which she had been so long engaged, she became his mistress. The rest which follows is the old story; her seducer, with the proverbial fickleness of a libertine, soon deserted her, and a severe fit of sickness and a malignant fever, not only made terrible ravages upon her personal appearance, but even destroyed those blessed attributes of benign nature, speech and hearing. Since then she has been a wanderer and a vagabond, until about two years since she found her way to this city, and became associated with some of her sex, her passion for strong drink increasing as she fell lower into the depths of degradation. Reason at length tottered upon its throne, and she became a hopeless imbecile, when her vicious companions, finding her a burden, turned her forth, and for a long period she has had no asylum but the vagrant quarters of the prison. On Tuesday evening, after a day's absence from her only habitation, she had contrived the means once again to steep her senses in beastly intoxication, and in that state was conveyed to the watch-house, from whence yesterday morning she was remanded by Judge Pruden for an short space of five days to the city prison—Civ. Com.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

The Pueblo Papers.—It is now well understood that the Executive Committee of Vigilance have purchased the Pueblo lot from the Greens. This was the only means by which they could get hold of them. The papers have been in possession of the Committee for some time past, and the payment, we understand, will be made to-day. The money was raised by the voluntary contributions of members of the Vigilance Committee, who trust to the honor of the city, and those benefited by the recovery of the papers, to reimburse them for this outlay. We understand it is the intention of those having possession of the papers to deposit them with the city archives, or in some of the courts. We also learn that some of our most eminent lawyers and the U. S. District Attorney have pronounced them of the greatest importance. The recovery of these papers will knock all the plans of Palmer, Cook, & Co., with regard to their fraudulent "Bolton & Barron claim," to rise as the L'Imantour claim and others of like stripe, into a "cocked hat."

Indian Troubles.—It appears that some disturbance recently took place between the whites and Indians at Vancouver's Island. A white settler had been paying too close attention to an Indian squaw, whose husband therefor fired at and wounded him. The settler complained to the authorities, when Admiral Bruce, the Monarch, then on the station, fitted out a party of five hundred men and two field pieces, who proceeded to the camp of the Indians, demanded him from the tribe, and, after some hesitation and resistance on the part of the natives, obtained possession of the one who had fired. The prisoner was then carried to the camp of the whites, tried with all formality, found guilty of an attempt to assassinate, was sentenced to death, and hanged upon a tree, all on the one day. This ended the matter. The natives submitted.

Spread of Civilization Among the Indians.—We have taught the Indians to drink whisky, and given them the small pox. Notwithstanding, a few of them still live. It appears that a high sense of honor has latterly been implanted in their breasts, and duelling is beginning to take root among them as peculiar "domestic institution." Perhaps that may serve to more rapidly thin their numbers. The other day (we learn from the Volcano Ledger), two of the gallant Diggers had their affair of honor. It was conducted apparently quite in accordance with the code, as expounded in repeated "personal correspondence" in the columns of a notorious little law and murder organ of this city.

The parties did not use rifles, at forty paces, nor revolvers at twelve, advancing to six, and firing ab libitum. They were content with bows and arrows which if not so deadly as firearms are troublesome enough. The principals were, of course, attended by their bodyguards, or "friends." After an exchange of arrows, by which the high-toned gentlemen were both slightly wounded, their friends considered that the demands of honor were satisfied, and withdrew their men from the field. Like nature's noblemen and other duelists, the bare-hipped champions of chivalry, after the fight, cordially shook hands, and squatted down to a dismal dish of swelled snails and dressed acorns, and a smell from an empty rum bottle. This though surly fare, is better than being made meat for worms.
